BOND ELECTION IS UNNECESSARY FOR STREET WIDENING

Monday, February 22, being Washington's birthday, the regular meeting of the City Council was held on Tuesday evening, February 23, all members answering to the roll call and Mayor H. H. Smith presiding.

The lighting committee reported that a light will be installed in the Colma district at the northeast corner of Mission and Market streets, and another on the east line of Mission street a short distance north of the above location.

Mayor H. H. Smith reported on the Mission street widening, announcing that the plans as submitted by Daly City providing for sufficient widths for the erection of safety stations without in any way interfering with the free flow of traffic was considered by all interested parties as a perfect plan, and would be carried out without the necessity of a bond issue by the city of Daly City, as was at first thought necessary.

Mayor Smith also said that high compliment had been paid the Daly City engineering department on their success in working out a plan that gives the maximum in safety, convenience and efficiency on a highway with congested business centers and heavily used by both auto traffic and the street car traveling public.

A careful study is being made by the street committee of the parking problem at the "top of the hill." The clerk was instructed to send a communication to the Merchants' Association, requesting that organization to appoint a committee of three, who will meet with the street committee and exchange ideas and also suggestions on this problem.

The ordinance committee reported that a survey has been made of the zoning in the Colma territory and other districts of the city, and a tentative report was submitted.

A resolution was passed establishing polling places and appointing election officers for the coming city election, on April 11.

The monthly bills and regular salary claims were ordered paid.

The City Council wishes to thank the Boy Scouts and the Mormon church for their donation of trees for the City Park. These trees were planted as memorials to George Washington, and are temporarily planted at the Citrus avenue pump house. They will later be transferred to the City Park.

Those present from Old Glory were: Commander Walter Dorn and wife, President Ethel Dorn, Senior Vice-President Della Campbell, Comrade Arthur Pangburn, Doris Pangburn, and Comrade Tim Crowley and wife, Louise Crowley.

BOY SCOUTS PLANT MEMORIAL TREES

In the brilliant sunshine of a perfect spring morning an interesting patriotic ceremony was observed last Monday when two acacia trees were planted on the lawn of the Citrus avenue pump house. The exercises were directed by Arthur J. Bodien, President of the District Committee, Boy Scouts of America, in the presence of a large gathering of Daly City people and visitors from San Francisco and the Peninsula. Mr. Bodien was supported by several capable speakers and by Boy Scout troops 148 and 149 and Scout Cubs' Companies Nos. 34 and 36. Commisssioner L. W. Johnston performed the honors of the occasion by planting the trees, which had been presented by Park Superintendent John McLaren, of San Francisco.

Mr. Bodien, as chairman, opened the proceedings with an appropriate reference to the life and example of George Washington, in whose honor the ceremony had been arranged, and reminded his hearers of the great advantages which modern Americans enjoy as a result of the great life work of our first President. He announced that the two trees would be planted and dedicated by the Boy Scouts of Daly City and gave warm praise to them and their leaders. Mr. Bodien further stated that the widening of Mission street through Daly City would shortly be accomplished. The speaker invited the Scouts and members of the audience to proceed after the ceremony to Mission street, where moving pictures would be taken. Mr. Bodien suggested that these pictures would present an interesting contrast with others which would probably be taken in years to come, long after the widening had been completed.

Mrs. S. A. Landini, fourth vice-president of the San Mateo county Parent-Teachers' Association, spoke. Mrs. Landini referred in glowing terms to the work accomplished by our present City Council and made special mention of the long and faithful service and the sterling character of Mayor H. H. Smith. She outlined the great principles included in the program of the Parent-Teachers' Association. Chief among these were the building of a great citizenship, the provision of suitable recreation for the upbuilding of the body, juvenile protection, and throughout all, the wise and happy combination of Church, School and State influences for the welfare of childhood. She further recommended a careful study of the life of George Washington, from whose example the youth of today would derive the greatest benefit. She urged that all recreation should be manful and not sinful.

The Boy Scouts, who were drawn up in two lines extending from the platform, then stood at attention and repeated the Scouts' oath. Under the leadership of Commissioner L. W. Johnston they then marched to the lawn, where the turf had been removed for the reception of the two trees. The planting ceremony was performed by Mr. Johnston and Councilman Henry Sundermann, who were supported by the members of the Boy Scout District Council and several other friends.

After the trees had been set in place, chairman Bodien returned to the platform and informed the audience that the members of the Latter-day Saints' Church had asked to join the Boy Scouts in the ceremony of the day, in dedicating the trees they had planted a few weeks ago. The leader of the Latter-day Saints' Church choir then conducted the singing of the National Anthem, after which the chairman called upon Elder Williams for an address. Mr. Williams gave a brief and clear review of the earlier years of George Washington and touched upon the experiences of the first President in his surveyor days, making special mention of his first important commission when sent by Governor Dinwiddie into Ohio. The speaker eulogized the excellent example which had been set by Washington in the sincerity, uprightness and obedience which were revealed in the days when he was in the service of the British government. These attributes remained with him in the later and greater responsibilities of his life, and his resolute character and devotion to duty should furnish a lofty inspiration to this modern age.

The next speaker was Mayor H. H. Smith, who was introduced by the chairman as one who had done magnificent work for Daly City. The Mayor was received with enthusiasm, and with his proverbial happy faculty of public speech struck a pleasing note in his opening remarks. He complimented the previous speakers and those who had handled the ceremony so efficiently. Standing in the warm sunlight he made feeling

AMERICAN LEGION HAS BUSY WEEK

Members of Daly City Post No. 410 of the American Legion have been very busy lately, and again this week they were on the go.

February 22, Washington's birthday, they took part in a tree planting ceremony and parade in Burlingame, rushing back to Daly City to have the colors at the tree planting ceremony held at the pump-house on Niantic avenue. Many Legionaires were noticed in the large crowd attending this affair.

Several of the members were at Mills Field last Sunday to witness the finish of the American Legion aerial roundup. Seven large planes, starting from different places in California, brought in membership cards, to make the membership in California larger than it has ever been before. Last year more than 60,000 Californians were members of the American Legion.

Among the many notable Legionaires arriving by plane was State Commander Van Hogan, a former member of the famous Wild West or Ninety-first Division.

Tonight, February 26, the members of Daly City Post will hold their monthly dance and social, in Eagles Hall. "Doc" and his haywire orchestra will furnish the music. And having had lots of practice playing for other organizations, they ought to be good tonight. Bring your friends. A good time is assured all. The brief business meeting will be started a little earlier, so as not to delay the dance.

The San Mateo County Council of the American Legion will hold their next meeting on Friday, March 4. At this writing it has not been announced where the meeting will be held.

On February 12, the Post had their colors at Horace Mann high school, the occasion being the dedication of the Greater Mission Unit colors. Those present were treated to a fine concert by the San Francisco Legion band.

Last Friday evening members of the Post attended the initiation of members held by Daly City Unit No. 410 of the American Legion Auxiliary. After the ceremonies, which were very impressive, home made cakes, dessert, and coffee were served by the kitchen committee, and the boys made sure that none of these cakes were left when they went home.

TREE PRESENTED TO BAY SHORE P. T. A. AND SCHOOL

Mrs. Victoria Roussel, of Belmont, again presented a tree for Founders' day to the Bay Shore Parent-Teachers' Association. Miss Roussel, much loved past president, gave a very interesting talk on Founders' day to a very large assembly.

A pageant on "The Seven Cardinal Principles of Education" was well presented by pupils of the Eighth grade. A short sketch on George Washington was presented by the Seventh and Eighth grades.

The tables were decorated in P. T. A. colors, with yellow daffodils and blue bachelor buttons.

Miss Roussel presented Mrs. Jack Wentworth, hospitality chairman, a blue and white badge of hospitality.

Bay Shore school boasts of ten singing mothers in its group, the mothers meeting one day each week to practice.

GRAMMAR SCHOOL NOTES OF INTEREST

Monday, February 22, was given over to public celebrations of the 200th anniversary of Washington's birth and the schools were closed for that day.

On the Friday preceding, there were appropriate exercises in all the schools throughout the district.

Washington's bicentennial year is to be the keynote until September of this year. Not only in memory and honor to this great hero, but as an inspiration in this trying time through which our country is now passing.

Baseball practice starts next week and the candidates for the various teams are busy practicing. There will be keen competition for the championship this year.

Vista Grande classes are getting larger this term. New pupils are coming in large numbers, increasing the numbers in the rooms. The children are responding very well and the work in the building goes on in a well organized manner.

The Woodrow Wilson basketball team went to Lomita Park on Friday. They showed very much better team work than the previous week and fought ferociously for the few points they gained. The score at the end of the first quarter was 3-2, the second quarter 5-3, the third quarter 13 to 5, and the fourth quarter 18 to 8. The advantage in each quarter belonged to Lomita Park. The Woodrow Wilson boys put up such a good fight that we cannot but feel very hopeful for their success in future games.

DALY CITY BOY SCOUTS DEDICATE TWO TREES

Last Monday morning, at 11 o'clock, a large crowd gathered at the Daly City municipal water works, Niantic and Citrus avenues, to witness Troops 148 and 149, Boy Scouts, and Cub Packs 34 and 36, plant two trees in commemoration of the bicentennial anniversary of George Washington's birth.

City Councilman Arthur J. Bodien, chairman of the district committee, officiated as master of ceremonies. He gave a very interesting and well worded talk on the Scout movement within this district. Mrs. I. Landini, vice-president of the Parent-Teachers' Association of San Mateo county, spoke on the part that the Parent-Teachers' Association plays in the Scout movement and also commended Mayor H. H. Smith and the members of the City Council for the good work they are doing for the boys of this community. Mr. E. L. Williams, of the Polytechnic high school, San Francisco, representing the Mormon church, gave an interesting speech on the life of George Washington. Several songs were rendered by the members of the choir of the Mormon church, while dedicating a tree planted by them a few weeks ago.

The boys were lined up on each side of the walk, the Scouts on one side, the Cubs on the other, directly in front of the speakers' platform. At a signal from the acting Scoutmaster, one boy stepped forward and the Scout troops repeated the Scout oath. This feature was a most impressive one.

District Commissioner L. W. Johnston conducted the planting of one

TANFORAN RACES BEGIN MARCH 31

Racing at Tanforan this Spring will begin on Thursday, March 31, and conclude on Saturday, May 14. In the thirty-nine days of the sport, it was announced today by the Pacific Coast Breeders Association, six stakes and other valuable features will be decided.

The five stakes run for the first time in the spring of last year will be renewed and to that list—The Tanforan Spring Special, the Derby Candidates Handicap, the Governor Rolph Handicap, the Bay Arch Handicap and the Au Revoir Handicap—will be added the Oakland.

Indications are the class of horses in both the stakes and in the overnight events will be as high, probably a bit higher, than the gallopers that thrilled immense throngs at the previous four sessions of the great pastime since its revival two years ago.

The "big race" of the period of racing to open the last day of next month is the Governor Rolph Handicap, the feature on Governor's day at the course, probably Saturday, April 23. This stakes attracted a record breaking crowd at its first running. To make it even more enticing to the fans, the distance has been changed from six furlongs to one mile and an eighth. The "Rolph" has not less than $5,000 added.

The features, including the six stakes are as follows:

Handicap, for three year olds and upward, one mile and seventy yards, not less than $1,000, Thursday, March 31.

Handicap, for three year olds and upward, six furlongs, not less than $1,500, Saturday, April 2.

Tanforan Spring Special, three year olds and up, one mile and a sixteenth, not less than $2,500 added, Saturday, April 9.

Derby Candidates Handicap, for three year olds, one mile and an eighth, not less than $2,000 added, Saturday, April 16.

Governor Rolph Handicap, for three year olds and up, one mile and an eighth, not less than $5,000 added, Saturday April 23.

Bay Area Handicap, three year olds and up, one mile and seventy yards, not less than $2,000 added, Saturday, April 30.

Oakland Handicap, three year olds and up, one mile and an eighth, not less than $2,000 added, Saturday, May 7.

Au Revoir Handicap, three year olds and up, one mile and one sixteenth, not less than $2,000 added, Saturday, May 14.

Handicap, not less than $1,000 on each of the six Wednesdays of the meet.

In distribution of purse money for the overnight races the method of grading horses has been adopted, the principle being to give prizes to platers, entered to be claimed for $1,600 or less not less than fifty per cent of value. For example, runners valued at $1,600 will contest for purses of not less than $800; these valued at $1,400 for purses of not less than $700; these valued at $1,200 for purses of not less than $600, and thousand dollar horses for purses of not less than $500. In the event any horse is entered to be sold for less than $1,000 the purse will be not less than $500.

Prominent breeders, who are interested in maintaining the present fundament of the thoroughbred, or if possible, raising it, made the recommendation about the apportionment on relative merit and it appealed at once to the management of Tanforan.

In the events for two year olds, if the claiming price is set by the racing secretary, the purse will be not less than $800; other events not less than $600.

There will be seven or more races each day.

Announcement will be made in due time as to the closing of the stakes.

Triple Birthday Celebration

Mrs. W. N. Wallace, of Peoria street, was hostess to twenty-two young guests at a birthday party given in honor of her niece, Miss Joan Tways' thirteenth birthday, and her sons, Billie and Georgie Wallace, who celebrated their tenth and eighth birthday on that day. The dining room was artistically decorated in red and white and blue fluted streamers hanging from the chandelier. The table center was a bon bon container trimmed with red, white and blue crepe paper, and on the top of it was Martha and George Washington dressed in their colonial costumes. After delicious refreshments were enjoyed, the guests spent the remainder of the day playing games. The three honored guests received many lovely gifts from their admiring friends.

J. U. H. S. SENIORS PLAN GRADUATION

The first meeting of the senior girls, as well as the most important meeting of the term, was called by Miss Potter, class advisor, last Friday to discuss graduation clothes. Practically every senior girl was present, so there should be no misunderstanding at graduation. There have been several specific rules set, and there will be no exceptions.

First of all, graduation is to be as simple as possible. No elaborate gowns will be allowed, so that excludes all satins, velvets, or metallic cloth. Dresses may be of pastel shades, of organdy, printed chiffon, or crepe. Taffeta is permissable, providing that the dress is not hooped or puffed. Dresses positiveiy may NOT have low backs or low necks. Shoes will be in accordance with the dresses; that is, no silver or gilded shoes. Dresses are not to drag, but may be of ankle-length.

The girls decided to carry spring bouquets. No one may wear corsages.

Graduation this year will of necessity be a strictly invitational affair. This applies to students as well as to outsiders, although the number of invitations is not restricted to seniors. Positively no one will be admitted without a bid, although only one bid is needed by a family. This restriction is made necessary on account of the demand for seats by friends and relations of the graduates, and the limited seating capacity of the High School Auditorium.

The delightful surprise of the meeting was the announcement that the auditorium would be newly decorated for graduation, the cost of which can be entirely met out of accumulated student body funds. New velvet curtains of a deep wine color are being purchased for the stage, and all the windows will be curtained with light purple drapes. New flood lights will also be purchased.

The announcement was made that the banquet (if given) will be semi-formal, whereas the senior ball will be as formal as the individual desires.

Dr. Stanley A. Hunter, of Berkeley, was the guest speaker at an assembly on Thursday, the eleventh. He is a special lecturer for the League of Nations and is an active leader in the civic and religious affairs of his community.

The United States history classes are making a special study of the League. Clive M. Saiz, of the history department, introduced the speaker, Dr. Hunter being a personal friend of his.

Briefly, the commercial and economic problems emerging from the World's War were described. The present depression had its start in the conditions brought on by the great conflict, the assembly was told.

"The task of the twentieth century is to make the universe a brotherhood—the nineteenth century made it a neighborhood, but we must take one more step. Try to forget racial hatreds and prejudices," was the speaker's plea.

Dr. Hunter described the formation of the League under the late President Wilson, a former teacher of his, and painted a vivid picture of the setting the organization enjoys. He emphasized the Health Committee and the Committee on Intellectual Cooperation strongly. The former is doing a great deal in combating disease and in locating epidemics.

"The League of Nations receives so much public abuse that it is difficult to view the facts in a non-partisan manner. Be for it or against it irrespective of party." In closing, Dr. Hunter said: "The World Court is not an adjunct of the League, but both organizations have the same objective—a warless world. I hope that the one idea of our leaders, world peace, will soon be achieved."

COLONIAL NIGHT AT COMPANY NO. 4

Last Saturday evening the Ladies' Auxiliary of Station 4, Daly City Fire Department, entertained their boy friend members of the station with a real Colonial ham and yam dinner, cooked in Southern style. The ladies looked real nice in their colonial dresses.

Sergeant Hilton entertained the crowd by singing his favorite ballad, entitled "Twas the fall of the year and the leaves began to fall."

Those present to enjoy the event were Chief of Police Doyle and Mrs. Doyle, Sergeant of Police Hilton and Mrs. Hilton, Assistant Chief Chesney and Mrs. Chesney, Capt. Rolff, Mr. and Mrs. Fonseca, E. J. Cuneo, Mr. and Mrs. Viotti, Mr. and Mrs. Vireno, Mr. and Mrs. Jordan, Jeff. Lee, Mrs. Foppiano, Mr. and Mrs. Fenstermacher and Mrs. Fenstermacher's sister, from Reno, Nevada.

CALIFORNIA NEWS REVIEW

Gov. Rolph sent telegrams to President Hoover and Secretary of the Interior Wilbur recently urging their support of Representative Swing's bill authorizing appropriation of $1,000,000 for Colorado River flood-control work. The highest floods of years are expected on the Colorado this spring, Gov. Rolph said.

Daniel H. Blood, State director of natural resources, announced his department will seek a permanent court injunction at Los Angeles May 9 to prevent natural gas wastage in the Santa Fe Springs oil field. This follows a decision of the United States Supreme Court upholding constitutionality of the California law of 1929 to halt waste of gas.

Due to a shortage of natural quail feed in Modoc County, many ranchers throughout the Alturas district have volunteered to feed the birds until they are again able to find feed for themselves. Grover Wilmer of the Lake City district estimates that 1800 quail are being fed at his place. Other ranchers report equally large flocks.

They smiled when the Army started transporting cavalry horses from place to place in motor trucks. What will they say now that trucks are being built to haul tanks? The California National Guard's Fortieth Tank Company at Salinas will soon be equipped with a tank carrier large enough to handle the largest infantry tank and capable of speeds up to forty miles an hour on the highway.

Snow so deep in the High Sierra that it has buried a village of summer homes was reported by Jack Bland, caretaker at Lake Alpine, when he reported at Stockton after skiing out of the mountains. Tamarack, a resort seventy-five miles from there, is covered so deeply, he said, that when he passed it he was unable to find a single house.

One hundred and fifty-nine applicants, representing the largest class in recent months, successfully passed a recent pharmaceutical examination and were granted certificates as registered pharmacists and pharmacist assistants, according to an announcement made by the California State Board of Pharmacy. The board also announced that the next examination will be conducted in Los Angeles, April 5, 6 and 7, and in San Francisco, April 20, 21 and 22.

Detailed specifications for the relocation of the Golden State Highway north from the Kern county boundary near Lebec to the foot of Grapevine grade, will shorten the distance more than a mile and will eliminate nearly a hundred curves, according to E. E. Wallace, district engineer under whose supervision the work will be done. Work on the first unit of the great construction project, elimination of hazardous Grapevine grade with its notorious "death curves," is scheduled to begin early this spring, the money already having been appropriated, the article reveals.

Guarding against the infestation of California farms from dangerous pests, state border quarantine officers intercepted 19,389 lots of contraband or infested fruits and plants crossing the border during 1931, Dudley Moulton, director of the state department of agriculture announced. The infested fruits, plants and plant products were found to contain 4,989 different insects and animal specimens belonging to 455 species of the insect world, it was announced. They were found in the baggage, camping equipment and automobiles of people entering California by automobile.

Representatives of fifty student-body organizations of public and private junior colleges of California will meet at the Visalia junior college, April 1 and 2, according to Ralph Arnold, president of the Visalia junior college student body. The annual conference of the Junior College Student Body Presidents' Association will be held at the same time. Arnold has appointed committees from the Visalia Junior College to arrange the program and entertainment for the visitors. John Gearhart is general chairman.

More purse-snatching cases were reported to the State Bureau of Criminal identification during January this year than for either the preceding month or January, 1931. Seventy-five cases were reported last month compared with fifty-five in December and forty-five in January, 1931. Assault-to-commit-murder cases also increased during the last month with twenty compared to nineteen in December and four in January, 1931.

Dirctor of Finance Vandegrift is conducting an investigation of franchise taxes paid to the State with the view of making more thorough the administration of the law. The director estimates franchise tax collections will be about 25 per cent less this year than last, due to business depression.

Imperial Valley by a vote of 6 to 1, has approved a contract with the government to construct a $38,500,000 all-American dam. The vote was 6456 to 1274, and ended a ten-year controversy.

Thousands of wild pigeons have swooped down on the Livermore Valley, sweeping fields clean of newly-sown grain to provide a serious hindrance to spring planting, now at its height. Reports from all sections of the valley indicate that the birds are as much a pest as they were two years ago when large flocks arrived here. Many fields will have to be reseeded and farmers are storming the State Fish and Game Commission offices in San Francisco for permission to kill the pigeons. State game laws protect wild pigeons unless they damage crops.

For the first time in the twenty-three years of its history Fresno's annual California raisin festival will have no raisin day parade this year. The festival association reached a decision to this end at its first meeting of the year, when national raisin week was set for May 9 to 14, and the latter day designated as raisin day. The gala parade, which heretofore has been the high light of the annual festival, will give way to the west coast relays, the annual track and field meet which attracts hundreds of high school, college, university and athletic club stars to the city.

Legality of Ventura county's newest industry is in question, according to the owners of beach lands where Nicholas A. Sezzolare has filed notice of location of tidewater lands in an attempt to develop oyster beds on a commercial scale. Mr. Sezzolare, whose home is in Monterey, has filed notice under a recent act of the Legislature "to encourage the planting and cultivation of oysters." He neglected to secure permission from owners of the beach lands, it is said, and the owners claim that he is not within his rights in his attempt to start an oyster "farm."

Gov. Rolph attained control of the State Board of Health for the first time since his inauguration when expiration of previous appointments allowed him to plug the holes with men of his own choice. In the reorganization, Dr. John H. Graves of San Francisco succeeds to the presidency, as was expected, replacing Dr. George E. Ebright after previous efforts of the Governor to remove him had failed. Dr. Ebright remains on the board, however, as a member. He has served for seventeen years. Dr. Edward Pallette of Los Angeles is the new vice-president. Just prior to the meeting, the Governor announced the appointment of Dr. Junius B. Harris of Sacramento to succeed Dr. Fred F. Gundrum and Dr. Gifford L. Sobey of Paso Robles to succeed Dr. Robert A. Peers of Colfax.

Confronted with official statements that nearly one-fourth of the forest fires in California last year were of incendiary origin, organized motorists and other groups interested in protecting the state's scenic assets and natural resources have launched plans to combat this menace during the coming fire season. Figures received by the California State Automobile Association show that out of 5,188 outdoor fires in California last year 1,239 were set by incendiaries. The total damage was estimated at more than $1,835,000. Indications that the danger of deliberately set fires will again be present this year have caused a statewide program of action to be inaugurated by the Stop Forest Fires Committee of California, of which M. B. Pratt, State Forester, is chairman.

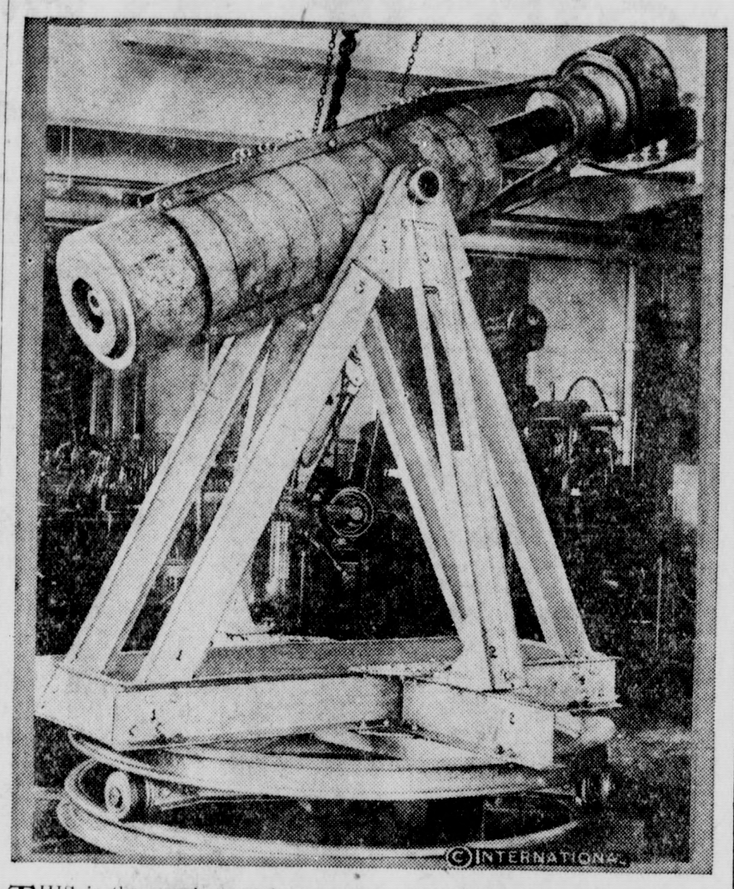
Summer tourists in California spend more than half of their time north of Tehachapi. This is shown by a survey made by Californians, Inc., based on 1931 tourist travel in this State. The itineraries of more than 4,000 touring parties between April and September 30 of last year were studied. Those who entered California through northern or central gateways spent 60 per cent of their time in this part of the State. Southern entrants who came north spent 42 per cent of their time in this section. An average of more than 55,000 tourists daily were in northern and central California during the six summer months. An aggregate of 9,953,610 days were spent by tourists in this section, against 8,055,551 days in the southern part of the State.

With 367 farm families listed in its membership, the Garden Grove Farm Center, in Orange county, has been acclaimed the largest farm bureau center in California. According to information from the American Farm Bureau Federation headquarters at Chicago, it is also the largest one in the United States. This accomplishment was recognized at the annual meeting of the California Farm Bureau Federation, recently held at Merced, when the Garden Grove delegation was presented with the handsome loving cup annually awarded to the largest farm center in the State. Another honor was the announcement from the American Farm Bureau Federation that Ralph Chaffee, president of the Garden Grove Farm Center, had won fifth place in the nation's farm bureau membership campaign. Mr. Chaffee secured sixty-one new members during the past year.

Gov. Rolph received a telegram from Secretary of the Interior Wilbur assuring him efforts will be made to give the Palo Verde (Riverside county) Irrigation District flood-control aid.

The historic old town of Cherokee, twelve miles north of Oroville, has produced another diamond which miners aver is of first class quality. The diamond, unpolished, weights ¾ carat and was found by Spencer Clinging. Local records show this is the 451st diamond recovered from the property.

First Cosmic Ray Telescope



THIS is the cosmic-ray telescope, first of its kind, which will be used to measure the intensity of this mysterious radiation from one part of the heavens for comparison with the strength of the rays from another portion of the skies. The telescope has been designed and built in the laboratory of the Bartol research foundation of the Franklin institute at Swarthmore, Pa. It is for the use of Dr. W. F. G. Swann, prominent physicist and director of the laboratory. Next summer he will take it to a place of higher altitude, such as the top of Mt. Washington or Pike's peak, where cosmic radiation is more intense.

TESTED RECIPES

OCCASIONALLY for luncheon or for a supper dish one likes a change, something which appeals to the taste and intrigues the imagination. The dish may be an ordinary one, but the serving makes it different.

Herring in Paper.

Soak smoked herring overnight in cold water after removing the heads and tails. Wipe dry and place in a paper bag, those prepared for cookery or in a greased paper. Place on a hot griddle and cook until the paper is well browned. Serve in the paper with:

Maitre d' Hotel Sauce.

Put a tablespoonful of butter into a small saucepan over a moderate fire and add to it chopped parsley and chives. Season with salt and a little lemon juice and while sizzling hot pour over the fish.

Another sauce to be used for this dish or for any fish is:

Sauce d' Anchois.

Take three or four anchovies, mash them and mix with two tablespoonfuls of butter. Prepare a brown sauce with browned flour, butter and milk. Stir in the anchovy butter and just before taking from the fire add the juice of half a lemon or more.

Dutch Sauce for Fish.

Take two tablespoonfuls of butter, one and one-half tablespoonfuls of flour, one cupful of liquid in which the fish was cooked, one cupful of milk, salt and paprika to taste. Cook the sauce, adding two egg yolks, one teaspoonful of lemon juice and beat well with an egg beater just before taking from the heat. Add a tablespoonful of minced parsley and serve.

Marzipan.

Take one-half cupful of heavy sugar sirup, warm it and mix with one-fourth pound of almond paste, add one-half pound of confectioner's sugar and work into a paste. Add a few drops of flavoring and mold into any desired form, using color and leaves of angelica; small fruits are easily copied.

MY MEMORY

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

WHY is it I remember
Things upstairs when I am down;
Recall some thing I meant to bring
When I'm half way to town?
Why is it in the attic
I think about the fire,
Or, far below, remember so
What attics may require?

Why is it I remember
Things downstairs when I'm up?
When up I went I fully meant
To bring along a cup.
Why is it, when I'm outdoors
I think of things within,
And, in again, remember then,
The things where I have been?

Why is it I remember
Things inside when I'm out,
My kitchen cares when I'm upstairs,
Am I always turned about?
Since at the proper minute
A thing I can't recall,
I wonder why it is that I

A STORY FOR BEDTIME

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

PETER SEES A CHANCE

Never give up, but be willing to try,
He always wins out who will never say die.

WAS ever anybody in a worse fix than Peter Rabbit? There he sat panting for breath under a pile of brush in the Green Forest with Hooty the Owl perched on his watch-tower just above, and, hiding in a hollow log not far away, Shadow the Weasel. Of the two Peter feared Shadow most. He knew that Shadow knew just where he was. In fact, if it had not been that Hooty had happened along just in time to swoop at Shadow and chase him into that hollow log, it is probable that Peter would have been caught before this.

"It's a lucky thing for me," thought Peter, "that Hooty did not come along until after I had got under this pile of brush. He doesn't know I'm here, and so he won't be watching for me at all. Shadow won't dare come out until Hooty has gone away, and until then I am perfectly safe. Perhaps I can steal away while Hooty is watching for Shadow. Of course, if I make the least sound Hooty will hear me. I don't see what Old Mother Nature was thinking of to give him such wonderful ears. It isn't fair to the rest of us."

Of course Peter quite overlooked the fact that Hooty's eyes are of very little use to him in daylight, and so he must do all his hunting at night and must have keen ears to help out his eyes in order to get enough to eat. Mother Nature is never unfair, though it may sometimes seem so.

"I'm glad," continued Peter to himself, "that there is snow on the ground, because that means that there will be no rustling of dry leaves when I move. It is dreadfully hard work to walk over dry leaves without making them rustle. That is one thing I do not have to worry about. I hope Hooty will be as patient as he usually is. If he sits there long enough, I wil get quite rested. Of course Shadow will follow my tracks as soon as the way is clear. He is the most persistent fellow of whom I know. He never gives up until he has to. Now I'll look about and see what chance I have to get away. The sooner I can do it the better. Shadow thinks I won't dare move while Hooty is on guard. I'm going to fool him if there is the least chance in the world, and the sooner I do it the better."

Very, very slowly and carefully Peter crawled to the edge of the brush pile farthest from where Hooty sat on his watch-tower with his eyes fixed on the hole in which Shadow had disappeared. He took care not to make a sound. Where the brush was very thick he crawled on his stomach through the snow under it. And so at last he reached the edge where he could peep out. Just a little way off was a big stump.

"If I could reach that," thought Peter, "without being seen, I think perhaps I could steal away. There is a little hemlock tree just beyond, and if I can once get that between Hooty and me he never will see me in the world. It is my one chance to get away from here, and after I've done that I will have to trust to luck to fool Shadow. He'll follow my tracks as sure as winter is here, once Hooty lets him out, and Hooty isn't going to sit there all night."

Peter looked back over his shoulder up at the top of the tall dead tree which was Hooty's watch-tower. Right on the very tip-top sat Hooty. If Peter had not known he was there he certainly would have thought Hooty a part of the tree itself. Peter shivered, and it wasn't the cold that made him shiver. Did he dare to cross that open place to the big stump right in plain sight of Hooty if he should turn his head?

To Hold Bank

Honeysuckle is often planted on a raw steep bank to hold it. Pockets should be dug into the banks and the vines planted. They grow rapidly, make a pleasing bank, and flower once or twice a year.

Sweetpea's Origin

The sweetpea is a native of the island of Sicily, and was first mentioned in 1695 by an Italian monk, who sent seeds to England and Holland. The seeds of sweetpeas became an article of commerce as early as 1724.

"Probably the rigid decorum of another day," says retrospective Rhetta, "could be attributed to keeping poised on a horsehair-covered chair."

One Camera Proves That Another Is a Falsifier

allusion to Daly City weather, and jocularly observed that a special city ordinance had been passed by the Council providing for ideal weather conditions on this auspicious day. He added that this must not be taken as a precedent for future occasions, but was a special arrangement for a special occasion. The Mayor stated that it had been estimated at least ten million trees would be planted on this day throughout the country as the nation's tribute to he memory of George Washingon. He felt that the planting of trees was a most appropriate method of commemorating the occasion, and was in itself of genuine benefit to the country. He then spoke briefly of the Boy Scout movement and indicated that the boys could learn much from the life of George Washington which would be of service to them in their own work. He reminded them that George Washington always played life's game in a big way. If they would follow his example the growth and strengthening and upbuilding of character would necessarily result. He commented on the great influence of the life of Washington upon the life of the nation.

"Two hundred years have rolled over the world since Washington was born," he said. "When we contemplate the service he rendered to this continent, and to all the world, our minds shudder at the speculation as to what the history of these two centuries would have been if he had not been born."

In conclusion he said: "On the 22nd day of February, 1832, Daniel Webster, standing in the shadow of the dome of the Capitol and facing a mighty throng, said: 'A hundred years hence other disciples of Washington will celebrate his birth with no less sincere admiration than we now commend it, and then, as now, may the sun in his course visit no land more free, more happy, and more lovely than this our own country.'"

The two trees will remain in their present location until arrangements are made for them to be transplanted to the Daly City Park, which will be their permanent home. Here in future years they will stand in the glory of their abundant foliage as living monuments to the memory of the Great Patriot in whose honor the ceremony of this day had been arranged.

WOODROW WILSON P. T. A. HAS SUCCESSFUL DANCE

Last Saturday night everyone looking for a good old-fashioned dance went to the Eagles' Hall. The dance held by the Woodrow Wilson-Vista Grande Parent-Teachers' Association was a great success. "Doc" and his haywire orchestra played music that made everyone dance. There was a large crowd and everyone had a good time. The coffee and hot dogs helped out a lot, too. The Association wishes to thank every one who helped make the affair such a success. Watch for the date for another dance.

On Friday, February 17, the Seventeenth District held their Founders' day celebration in San Mateo. Mrs. Landini had charge of the program. The pyramid was built for child welfare, each unit contributing a block. The candle lighting ceremony was very impressive. There was a large attendance from all units. Belmont unit won the honors for the greatest percentage present. Those present from Daly City were Mesdames Hanselman, Foreman, Page, Blades, Talmadge, Nelson, Owens and Woodside. Mrs. Catherine Foreman was appointed Americanization chairman for the Seventeenth district during the business session.

Mrs. M. Woodside attended the tree planting ceremony held Monday morning at the Daly City water works. This was conducted by the Boy Scouts, with Mrs. L. Landini as the principal speaker.

There will be a "cake" whist held on March 9, at 2 P. M., at 532 San Diego avenue. Be sure and come.

There will be an executive board meeting on March 11, at the home of the President, Mrs. M. Woodside. Every officers please keep this in mind.

Discussions about averages of this and that bring to mind the story of Mortimer Fleishhacker, a California banker, who asked a Pullman porter what was the average tip he received from passengers. The porter said the average tip was a dollar, and the banker accordingly handed him a dollar. Then the porter confided: "Boss, you is the fust one to come up to the average."

The advertising man was proposing. "Remember," he said, "this is the last day for this astounding offer."—Lehigh Burr.

LEGION AUXILIARY INITIATES MEMBERS

Friday evening of last week Daly City Unit No. 410, Ladies' Auxiliary to the American Legion, held an initiation at Eagles Hall for all members taken into the Unit since the permanent charter was granted, twenty-five members being admitted, of which eighteen were Junior members and seven adults.

The initiation work was capably put on by the drill team of Greater Mission Unit No. 347. Gladys Anderson, president of the Eighth district, occupied the president's chair.

Following the initiation a George Washington program was enjoyed. A flag drill by sixteen Juniors in conjunction with a dialogue by John Foreman, as George Washington, and Virginia Callsen as Martha Washington, was greatly enjoyed. Comrade McGregor favored the guests with two vocal selections, accompanied by Comrade Broom at the piano. Short talks were given by County Council Commander Clarence Whitney and Commander Jack Mockler of Daly City Post No. 410.

Gladys Anderson, president of the Eighth district, highly complimented Grace Hill, membership chairman, on the wonderful evening she had made possible by getting so many new members. Mrs. Hill and her four daughters were among the members initiated.

At the close of the meeting delicious refreshmenst were served by Mildren Rasor and her able committee, who are to be highly complimented for the wonderful "eats."

Daly City Unit No. 410 is planning a box social for the evening of April 1, to be held at Eagles Hall. Much fun is in store for all who attend this affair.

Last Sunday afternoon a large number from Daly City Unit and Post motored to Mills Field airport to attend the aerial pick-up of the state membership drive. The Eighth district of the American Legion Auxiliary, of which Daly City Unit No. 410 is a member, were the first to go over the top in membership, having obtaned 540 members, which is forty-one members over the quota for the Eighth district.

Several state officers of both the Legion and Auxiliary arrived at the field in airplanes. Mrs. Bernice O. Keyes, state president of the Auxiliary, flying from San Diego, was greatly thrilled upon her arrival and highly complimented this district upon the wonderful showing made in the membership drive. Other officers present were Mrs. Ethel Flynn, state secretary, Mrs. Mathedbal, aerial president, and both the state and district membership chairmen.

Mrs. Gladys Anderson felt very much repaid for the work she has done in bringing her district to such a high plane of efficiency.

Early Monday morning the Unit and Post colors and representatives from both organizations were on hand at Burlingame to take part in the George Washington celebration and parade conducted by Burlingame Unit and Post. After this celebration the members hurried back to Daly City to take part in the tree planting exercises of the Cubs and Boy Scouts, held at the Daly City municipal waterworks on Niantic avenue.

Ladies, be sure to be on hand at the boys' dance this Friday evening at Eagles Hall. You know, "Doc" and his haywire orchestra sure means a good time.

Some of our foreign investments may not be entirely sound, but they nevertheless have the appearance of permanency.

PLAN TO DOUBLE THE QUAIL OUTPUT

Quail season will soon start at the state game farm near Yountville and Chino. Not the hunting season that the sportsman generally conceives, but the season for egg laying and hatching.

And affairs are going to be booming with the tiny little chicks this year, because arrangements have been made to more than double the production. In fact, August Bade, superintendent of game farms for the Division of Fish and Game, declares that plans are already complete to increase the output by several thousand birds.

One hundred pens are ready at Yountville to receive the tricky native birds, and another hundred spaces are under construction. Because of the quail's skill in overcoming obstacles, it is necessary to use special small-mesh wire to hold them in. All construction work will be completed by April 1, and from then on the air will fairly ring with the calls of the parents and the "teep-teep-teep-teep" of the babies.

At Chino the pen space for quail is also being doubled. There will be at least one hundred pens ready for the birds that are destined to augment the stock of Southern California. Even though this farm is somewhat smaller than the parent farm at Yountville, the production will be pushed to capacity.

It is mighty touchy work, this business of raising quail in captivity. Bade says that one of the greatest difficulties, disease problems, has been practically overcome through the use of electric hatchers and brooders. The proud little birds get some very independent notions about laying, and unless the greatest care is taken in preparing the pens and handling the birds, success is apt to be limited.

The birds raised and matured will be liberated on refuge lands as well as on quail depleted areas and will form the basis stock for the generations to come. Division officials say that the liberation of these farm reared birds, in conjunction with the laws and proper field management, is but a part of the program to replenish the game supply in California.

Alphonse and Albert Hell, of Pelham, N. Y., who had suffered ridicule because of their family name, asked a court to permit them to change it to Heil. The judge thought the request reasonable and approved the change.

For 26 years what was reputed to be the mummy of an Egyptian princess attracted the attention of visitors to a New Jersey museum. When the supposed ancient relic was dusted off it was found to be only a dummy, instead of a mummy—an artificial cadaver stuffed with rags.

A 7-year-old Alabama farm boy admitted to enforcement sleuths that his father had whiskey hidden under the corn in a big crib. After laboring several hours to remove the corn, they found no liquor. The youngster laughed and said: "Oh, ho! I played a good joke on the law."

Protecting others at risk to themselves is all in the day's work for policemen, but a rather unusual case of self sacrifice was reported by Patrolman McLaughlin of New York, whose job is watching for pickpockets in the subway. While engrossed in that duty his own wallet containing $80 was stolen from his pocket.

Fifty years ago Marie Felicie, a little French maid of New Orleans, had yellow fever and doctors told her she had only a day or two to live. She was married to E. B. Peryonin on her supposed death bed. And they recently celebrated their golden wedding anniversary. The doctors were not among those present.

Sailors of a Coast Guard cutter off the New Jersey coast saw a man sitting on the beach frantically waving his arms and screaming for help. Going to his assistance they found that he had carelessly sat down on a concealed muskrat trap which held him fast.

Einstein is said to have given this more easily understood explanation of his theory of relativity: "When you sit with a nice girl for two hours it seems only a minute, but when you sit on a hot stove for a minute it seems two hours."

No "yes man" is Representative Ab Knowlton of the Arizona legislature, who has voted "No" on every measure which has come before that body during his 15 years' service as a members. For his consistency fellow townsmen gave him a gold medal and a purse of $85. Knowlton said "No" again and gave the money and medal to the poor.

John H. Wilson, 93-year-old Civil War veteran of St. Paul, resents the idea that he is too old or infirm to perform his duties as bailiff and mail clerk for the state industrial commission. He was discharged from the job December 31 and has filed suit to force his reinstatement.

For avoidrupois at least, the prize baby of 1932 so far seems to be the son of Mrs. Anthony Caruso, of Newark, who weighed 18 pounds at birth. The young giant is the Caruso family's seventh child.

Chicago racketeers, in the guise of union taxi-drivers, have been extremely arbitray and ruthless of late, by intimidating owners of private cars who desired to drive their own vehicles to funerals of their frineds. According to the dictates of these pirates, anyone who desires to join a funeral procession in Chicago must engage a union taxi. But when a member of the American Legion was buried recently, his comrades firmly told the racketeers where to get off, and ex-service men drove their own cars without molestation.

PRINTING THE NEWS

When to print a disagreeable story and when to leave one out of the paper is one of the most troublesome problems of a small town editor, says a recent writer. In the case of a person who is unfaithful to a public trust, or one who is guilty of a serious crime, it is not difficult to decide, because the public interest, as well as the public's right to have the news, demands that it be printed.

There are some cases, however, in which the offense is entirely of a personal nature, and in which publishing the story would bring sorrow and embarrassment to innocent persons without serving any beneficial purpose. In these the making of a proper decision is often not easy. If the story is printed, relatives and friends of the person concerned will feel that it is unnecessary; if it is suppressed, the scandal-mongers will be disappointed, and many will insinuate that the editor was "bought off."

These same scandal-mongers would howl the loudest, however, if their own shady actions were held up to public gaze.

So it is hard to please everybody—in fact, impossible—and no editor of sense tries to please everybody. He must let his own judgment and conscience be his guide.

If he errs on the side of kindness and sympathy for the unfortunate, his error will be forgotten by the more enlightened readers of his newspaper.

BIG NEWS OF 1931

Since the end of 1931, news editors of the various press associations have been picking out what they consider the ten biggest news stories of the year, as is their annual custom. While the selections vary, all include the following in their list:

The world-wide business depression and occurrences related thereto.

The Sino-Japanese dispute and its consequent developments.

Death of Thomas A. Edison.

Events considered of almost equal news value to the three mentioned above were: The Post-Gattey flight around the world in 8 days, 15 hours and 51 minutes. Abdication of King Alfonso as Spain becomes a republic. The Pope's first broadcast to the world. The Wickersham reports. Conviction of Al Capone. Mahatma Gadhi's activities. Knute Rockne's death in an airplane crash.

Other stories given an important place in the year's news include "Pepper" Martin's playing in the World Series; Culbertson-Lentz contract bridge tournament; the visits to the United States of Premier Laval of France and Foriegn Minister Grandi of Italy; and the imprisonment of Albert A. Fall, former secretary of the interior.

PUSH YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Speaking before the Advertising Club of the City of Washington on a recent occasion, Howa d W. Berry, president of the Club, declared that hundreds of concerns had reported profits in 1931, had avoided laying off employees, and had actually increased the volume of their business, "through the impetus of ingenious advertising."

"What a change there would be in the employment situation," said Mr. Berry, "if instead of the comparatively few aggressive companies which have maintained sales volumes through courageous merchandising there would now step forth a hundred thousand enterprises with an energy and enthusiasm to accomplish the same results."

There is no question, as Mr. Berry's remarks implies, that the very best way, if not the only way, to restore business as a whole throughout the country is for each and every concern to restore its own business. Jerusalem was kept clean by every man sweeping in front of his own door. The business of the country will be all right if every individual business is put upon a satisfactory basis.

Agencies, both private and governmental, devoted to the gathering of business statistics have reported that in innumerable cases in every section businesses that have been determinedly and confidently pushed during the past year have succeeded and have made money. Some of them are retail stores and some are manufacturers. The men behind these concerns are confident of the future. They have not forgotten the fact that there are 120,000,000 people in this country who have to live every day. These people still have the same wants and desires they always have had, and, while they may not have in the aggregate as much money as they have had at some other times, they yet have enough money to buy the necessaries of life, and that means that in the aggregate they do an enormous volume of business every day. It is the firms that go out for business that get it.

STILL WORSE THAN WAR

About a year ago the fact that more persons were killed in automobile accidents during an eighteen month period than were killed in the A. E. F. in the World war, was extensively commented upon. Now, according to a booklet issued by an insurance company, automobile accidents are still worse than war. During eighteen months of the World war, 60,510 American soldiers were killed in action or died of wounds, and 182,674 were wounded, not mortally. In the eighteen months ending December 31, 1932, automobile accidents were rseponsible for the death of 53,650 people, while 1,576,840 were injured.

This booklet emphasizes some information that every motorist and pedestrian should know. During 1931 deaths increased 3.3 per cent over 1930, in spite of a reduction in the total number of persons injured. This apparent contradiction is laid to the increasing speed with which we drive. Cutting in, violation of the right-of-way laws, driving on the wrong side of the road, skidding and driving off the roadway were likewise responsible for many deaths.

More than 42 per cent of deaths were caused when a car struck a pedestrian. Collission with fixed objects accounted for 12.1 per cent, and collisions with other cars, 24.9 per cent. In the case of injuries, 53.1 per cent occurred when cars struck each other and 29.8 per cent when they struck pedestrians.

These facts are of immense value to the thoughtful motorist. They show the primary causes of accidents and, consequently, suggest means of eliminating them. Drastic steps must be taken if we are to lower the horrible and steadily increasing toll of traffic deaths and injuries.

ALL WRITERS NOW

It is the simplest thing in the world to win fame as a writer nowadays—provided you have won fame in some other way first. The newspapers and magazines bristle with articles by this or that celebrity, and it begins to look as if famous folks are going to monopolize the printed page, to the exclusion of professional writers.

But there's a catch in it. In most cases the famous folks do not write the articles which they are supposed to write. They merely give a regular writer an outline of what they want to say, and he does the rest. When the work is finished, the celebrity gives it his O. K., and it is published as his own.

Of course, there are many prominent men and women who actually write the articles and books which bear their names, but in the case of stage people, pugilists and other sport champions, politicians and even business men, the actual writing is usually done by a professional, known as a "ghost writer."

Literary efforts by proxy appear to be quite remunerative, however, particularly if they run to testimonials endorsing cigarettes and the like.

That term "reconstruction fund" doesn't sound so good to some of the older Southern brethren.

The trouble with superior people is that they usually insist on reminding us of how superior they are.

ECONOMY THAT IS EXPENSIVE

According to a recent report, 6,000 persons are burned to death in American homes every year. Eighteen hundred of these are children under 10 years of age.

Failure to keep a home in proper repair, thus making it an easy prey to the fire demon, is the most danberous kind of "economy." When electrical work is needed, it should be done by a licensed electrician, not by an amateur.

A common unwise practice is to attempt home dry-cleaning. Not only is this a doubtful economy, as it is difficult for untrained hands to obtain satisfactory results, but the danger involved is extreme, since the cleaning fluids usually are highly inflammable, requiring but a tiny spark to ignite the fumes which they give off. Many people lose their lives every year as a result.

Home owners should likewise bear in mind that heating plants and chimneys require continual attention. It is false economy as well as dangerous to neglect them at any time.

Putting hot ashes in combustible containers, permitting rubbish to accumulate or leaving paint or oil-soaked rags in homes invite loss and tragedy from fire.

Real economy is a good thing—but it must go hand in had with common sense, and nowhere does it apply more forcibly than in dealing with fire hazards.

VENUS, THE BEAUTIFUL

No one who pays any attention to the stars at all can have failed to admire the beautiful Venus, which as the evening star has shown with unsurpassed splendor of late.

Because of its nearness to the earth and its power of reflecting most of the light it receives from the sun, Venus is the most brilliant planet, able to cast a shadown on a clear night when no moon is visible.

Venus will shortly disappear toward the sun, to reappear later as a morning star. Because of this recurring phenomenon, the ancients supposed it to be two separate stars, to which they gave the names of Phosporus (Lucifer) the morning star, and Hesperus (Vesper) the evening star. The discovery that they were one and the same was made, however, several centuries before the birth of Christ.

About twice in a century Venus, as viewed from the earth, passes across the face of the sun, the two transits occurring eight years apart. Thus such transits occurred in 1631 and 1639, 1761 and 1769, 1874 and 1882, and will next occur on June 9, 2004, and June 6, 2012.

Venus has been highly esteemed in all ages. Homer refers to it as Kallistos (the Beautiful) and its worship as a type of beauty figures in mythology. In an age when the planets were personified as deities, it is easy to understand why this most beautiful of all heavenly bodies should have been selected to typify the Goddess of Love.

WHERE THINGS WEAR OUT

It is remarkable that people ever got along at all before a benevolent Uncle Sam, through the medium of his many departments and bureaus, hit upon the idea of regulating their lives by a wonderful series of advisory bulletins.

A few of these amazing screeds were enumerated by Senator Pat Harrison in a facetious speech ridiculing them in his characteristic style. He mentioned, mong others, government bulletins on "Utilization of calcium in spinach," "Lamb as you like it," "Bringing up Bobby," "Reindeer recipes," "Principles of window curtaining," "How to dress for a sun bath," and even "Love adventures of the American bullfrog."

Hundreds of other bulletins and pamphlets of about equal absurdity are issued by the Labor, Agriculture and Commerce departments in Washton, and the cost of preparing and printing them is borne, of course, by the taxpayers, who may or may not need this enlightenment.

One other bulletin for the edification of the faithful housewife deserves special mention. It is entitled "Where sheets wear out." If she reads this she will know without even taking the trouble to look over her bed linen. We await eagerly for a treaties on "Where pants wear out."

And possibly in the course of human events the bureaucrats may have material for a more practical dissertation on "Where the taxpayers' patience wears out."

GAS IN 1931

From a comparative standpoint, the manufactured gas industry had a good year in 1931. While total sales registered a decline of 2.5 per cent, due to the general industrial depression, use of gas for house-heating increased nearly 20 per cent—3,600,000,00 cubic feet.

It is a testimonial to the efficiency, the economy and the adaptability of gas, both in the home and in industry, that the decline in business was so small. Gas has become a modern necessity and the average family makes cuts in many other directions before curtailing its use.

Senator Hiram Johnson doesn't want to be "kidded" about running for President. But he has stood it good-naturedly in the past.

If we banish illiteracy, where in the world are we to get our future jurymen?

It is easier to convince those who get caught that "honesty is the best policy."

We read that 35 per cent of people have perfect vision. And they get many an eyeful.

It appears that Al Smith doesn't choose to tell whether he will choose to run.

This light GLARES and is bad for his eyes

ANY school child knows what's wrong with this picture.

It shows an example of poor lighting—and this kind of lighting is in most homes today.

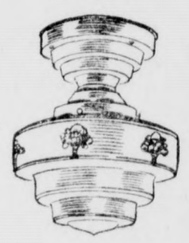
Poor lighting is a handicap in life. It causes eye-strain. It makes the studious child sleepy and he wants to go to bed early. His school work suffers.

To avoid glare, shade all your lights. But also make sure that you have enough light to permit you to see clearly. You should have an abundance of shaded light in each room, especially in the kitchen. Good lighting is cheap. In the living-room it costs but 1½ cents an hour.

Proper lighting is easy to have. P. G. and E. lighting specialists will gladly advise you.

Dealers in modern lighting units also know the value of an abundance of shaded light. Investigate. You will find it worth your while.

Section of modern lighting unit that directs raw light to ceiling, diffuses it evenly over the entire room and correctly controls the light.



Diffusing bowl enclosing electric lamp prevents glare and eye-strain. Excellent method of controlling light.

ANOTHER DOG HERO

From Germany comes a well authenticated press story concerning the rescue of two boys from the icy waters of the Danube river by a hunting dog's intelligence and heroism.

While skating, the children broke through the ice and cried for help. A hunter who happened to be nearby commanded his dogs to go after them. After five plunges the animal caught the clothing of one child and dragged him ashore, immediately returning for the second, who had drifted under the ice. After a great struggle, he, too, was brought out by the dog, which then collapsed.

Resuscitation was employed to finish the life-saving procedure, and two more human beings were indebted to a dog for saving them from death. Still, some people will argue that an animal can't think.

HERE AND THERE

Joseph Zargette, of Calais, France, was arrested for throwing his wife out of a window because she went to a dance.

"It was worth it!" sighed T. H. Rising, of Portland, Ore., as he paid a $2.50 fine in city court for kissing a girl while driving with one hand on the wheel.

James Rorkin, of St. Louis, had his wife arrested for pointing a revolver at him and taking away his week's wages.

An original sentence of 15 days in jail was gradually stepped up to six months in tthe case of Mrs. Lee Jordan, of Carbondale, Ill., for continued use of profanity in court.

Two burglars ransacking the home of Samuel Sikora in San Antonio, Tex., became so annoyed by childish questions from the Sikora children that they put them to bed.

Mrs. Elizabeth Page and the Rev. John Squires, childhood sweethearts, both now 84 years old, were married recently in Brockton, Mass., after a separation of 66 years.

After twenty-five days of hiccoughing, Mrs. Edith Cantrell, of Stuttgart, Arkansas, was cured by a ride over rough roads on her way to a hospital for treatment.

A cozy cell is preferred by David R. Bentson, of Los Angeles, who told police he had lost $53 and was afraid to face his wife after he had told her.

"And to my divorced wife I leave a kiss," concluded the will of J. C. Roberts, of London, who disposed of a $250,000 estate.

"Let me finish first," said Mrs. Ella Payton, of St. Louis, when Judge Curtis tried to interrupt her testimony in court.

Four years after he swallowed three coins, Jan Semmich, of Detroit, was operated on for their removal.

The will of Mrs. J. C. Foster, of Cork, Ireland, bequeathed $25,000 to her cook.

Richard N. Neville, of Cincinnati, was granted a divorce because his wife eloped with a guest at a dance the couple was giving.

Mrs. Etta L. Glover, of Atlanta, Ga., testified in her divorce suit that her husband had forced her to sleep nightly with his favorite dog.

A conscience stricken farm hand who fifteen years ago stole a gallon of cider and 75 cents from his employer, E. T. Palmer, of Columbia, Mo., has sought to repay his debt.

Immediately after being granted a divorce from her husband on charges of desertion, Mrs. Matilda Nichols, of Farmington, Ill., secured a license to marry a brother of her former husband.

Two burglars met while trying to rob a West London jewelry store, and got into a fight, both being arrested.

Forty inmates of the poor-house in Glasgow refused to work because they were given thin poridge.

An orphan pig on the farm of J. C. Heber, of Hastings, Nebraska, is being fed by bottle.

Mrs. J. C. Crowthers, of St. Louis, sold an old sofa in which her husband had hidden $1,200.

Prince McBride, professional musician of London, played the piano at the Olympia Ballroom for 61 hours.

"I am an old fool," said John R. Vorak, of Chicago, when arrested for drunkenness.

As he paid a $50 fine for speeding, Robert W. Galsen, of Chicago, kissed each of the $10 bills he tendered.

Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Long walked to London from Glasgow, a distance of 334 miles.

Anthony Novello, of Baltimore, who found a bracelet worth $2,500, and tried to sell it for $10, was sent to prison for "stealing by finding."

Mark Geldon, of Detroit, molded himself a very satisfactory set of false teeth from scraps of aluminum which he melted.

Because he married his sister-in-law's niece, Captain Alfred Davis, of St. Louis has become his brother's nephew.

Appearing before Judge Miller in Chicago and asking temporary alimony, Mrs. Ervin Boettcher said her husband would toss her into a bathtub full of cold water if she objected to his going out nights.

Mme. Eugenie Valtis, of Brussels, after marrying her uncle against her family's wishes, eloped with a gardener.

Mrs. Ann Kelly, of Lewisham, England, was thrice married without changing her name.

WOULD FURTHER TAX STATE GAS AND ELECTRICITY USERS

Ogden Mills, secretary of the treasury, has recommended to Congress a 7 per cent tax on all domestic uses of gas and electricity. If Congress follows his recommendation, 7 cents on the dollar will be added to every bill for gas and electricity used in the home.

According to A. F. Hockenbeamer, president of the Pacific Gas and Electric Company, the proposed tax will take $2,300,000 a year out of Northern and Central California.

"The territory supplied by the Pacific Gas and Electric Company," said Mr. Hockenbeamer, "will be called upon to pay over $2,000,000 a year to Uncle Sam, while the area served by the San Joaquin Light and Power Corporation will have to send on to Washington another $300,000 annually.

Of this total of $2,300,000, roughly $1,300,000 will come out of those who consume electricity in the home, and $1,000,000 out of those who use gas.

"Apparently the government intends to tax every form of domestic use. It plans to take its toll out of gas used for cooking and heating, and to tax electricity used for light and heat, for running the sewing machine and the refrigerator, for every service known to the modern home.

"The tax is clearly a tax on necessities. Gas for cooking is in most homes the only fuel available. The same is true of electricity for light. There is hardly a home in Northern and Central California that does not use both. To cook food is as necessary as to have the food itself. Light is equally an essential of life.

"We have on the Pacific Gas and Electric and the San Joaquin systems approximately 1,000,000 domestic consumers, who will come under this tax. When we consider such numbers it is not too much to say that the tax is the most drastic ever imposed on the home in this country. The only tax like it is the French tax on windows.

"Business men in our territory are much disturbed by the proposed tax. They point out that sending $2,300,000 a year to Washington in taxes means taking that much out of trade and business in Northern and Central California. They say that if this amount of money is allowed to stay at home it will be spent in stores and shops for food, clothing and furniture and for the hundred and one other needs of daily life. If it is taken out of local trade, all of us will feel it in less buying at home and in less employment in our cities and towns.

"Chambers if Commerce, Merchants' Association and other organizations realize the danger and the burden and are passing resolutions against the tax and sending protests to our Congressmen and Senators in Washington."

GOOD NEWS FOR HOMES

New ways to comfort and contentment are being found by many housewives who never knew how easily they could banish irritation, monotony and drudgery. Practically at no cost they get conveniences and advantages formerly thought unobtainable. A home economics authority says:

"Disused space in any basement now is made the most useful and popular spot. The washer, electric or gas-engine, paying for itself in weekly savings, is the heart of a layout that proves its value every 'pink Monday.' Other times the space is a recreation room, where children play safely and happily. Color schemes are often adapted from the finish of the washer, and the floor sometimes is painted for games. It is easy to take clothes out for the healthful open-air drying they should have every week. Any handy man can provide this new dual-purpose room."

Washers are in such ranges of models and prices that it is simple for a family to fit its needs, says the American washing machine manufacturers association. Women who knew them only as their mothers had them are surprised by the ease with which work is done in today's models. And the room does not need the tedious "redding up" demanded in other days.

It is interesting to consider how greatly the manufacturers improve home living and bring great economies to the American family, by their constant ambition to keep perfect products before the home public.

Among the recent anniversary celebrations was that of Jiggs and Maggie, who have graced the comic pages for 20 years, making their creator, Cartoonist George McManus, a millionaire in the meantime. The story is told that the famous characters are caricatures of the parents of a girl McManus wanted to marry in his youth, and who thwarted his matrimonial ambitions. Which may or may not be true.

Former mayor Big Bill Thompson of Chicago lost out in politics, but has met success in his ambition to be a yacht captain. He recently obtained a license to pilot fresh water vessels up to 500 tons, passing his examination for a Federal permit with a grade of 84.

Anyway, a lot of us will have a good alibi if we are confronted with a charge of hoarding.

WEATHER TO SUIT ALL

Americans who tire of the weather as a subject of conversation would be delighted with a tour of Colombia, the northernmost nation of South America, set squarely across the Equator, and one of the most interesting.

There live the descendants of the Spanish conquistadores, who found gold, fame and territory for their king in "New Granda," the original name of Colombia, which is now commemorating the centennial of its constitution as a republic.

Modern Colombians never mention the weather, it is said. They select what kind they like best and live in it the year round. Or, if wealthy, they keep various "haciendas" in various climates and move from one to the other as they choose.

Colombia has every type of climate from the hottest tropics to eternal snow, and Colombians have their homes in each variety.

At Buenaventura, for example, where Grace Line ships arrive twice a week, travelers will find the jungle-grown tropics of the story books. They can climb higher and higher into the interior of Colombia, through and across the Andes mountains, to find the climates and cloudless skies which they desire.

They can mount to the national capital, Bogota, where it is cool in the daytime, and cold at night. And they can attempt, although no one has ever succeeded, to climb the perfect cone of Mount Tolima, where snow has stood eternally since the creation.

At a testimonial concert in his honor recently, Adolph Lewisohn of New York was eulogied by prominent citiens for his philanthropy and contributions to the cause of good music. That his devotion to music is real is evidenced by the fact that at the age of 80 he is still taking vocal lessons.

BRISBANE SCHOOL ORGANIZES P. T. A. WITH 21 MEMBERS

Brisbane school organized a Parent-Teachers' Association on February 9, Mrs. R. J. Spann, president of the Seventeetnh District, officiating, and twenty-one charter members were taken in. Mrs. Spann installed the officers.

Brisbane is the baby of the Association, and it is hoped that it will be a romping youngster in a very short time.

The second meeting was held on February 18, when two more members were added to the list.

A whist was the first social affair planned, to be held at the home of one of the members. Members of Bay Shore P. T. A., who seem to be everywhere at once, were present at both of these meetings. The Singing Mothers of this group sang "Whispering Hope," and the "Mothers' Hymn," at the first meeting and made itself helpful in general at the second meeting. At a very late hour Mr. Fredericks, hospitality chairman, served over thirty in attendance. For a new Association, it seems very wide awake indeed.

"GRAND HOTEL" SCHEDULED FOR GEARY THEATRE, FEB. 29

An event of the first theatrical magnitude is promised for the Geary Theatre, San Francisco, on Monday evening, February 29, when Belasco and Curran will offer "Grand Hotel," Vicki Baum's world famous stage hit, for a limited engagement.

"Grand Hotel" has just concluded a thirteen months run in New York, and is still playing to capacity in Chicago, and has been produced with great success in London and Paris, following its original presenation in Berlin. Belasco and Curran, who control the Coast rights, are bringing the play to San Francisco after a run in Los Angeles that has broken every stage record for the past decade.

The story of this sensational triumph is a chapter out of the hectic life of a great city—what goes on at one time in a metropolitan hotel where an assorted group of people find that the threads of their lives are tangled in a strange and startling way. It crowds its thrilling events into eighteen swiftly moving scenes. They follow its guests from telephone booths into the lobby, the bedrooms, the conference and gambling rooms, the corridors and the grill of the hostelry, in rapid succession as the play mounts to a breathless climax.

Between players, musicians and technicians, nearly a hundred people are concerned in the production. Belasco and Curran have provided a splendid cast headed by Olga Baclanova, Ian Keith, Arnold Korff, Frank Reicher, Chrisian Rub, and Dorothy Tree. William Keighley has performed a miracle of expert stagecraft in his direction, according to all reports.

The Geary management has installed an extra staff of clerical help to handle the advance sale for this tremendously popular attraction, which unquestionably will duplicate in San Francisco its feat in other metropolitan centers, of attracting capacity audiences over a long period.

"And upon what income do you propose to support my daughter?"

"Five thousand a year."

"Oh, I see. Then with her private income of five thousand a——"

"I've counted that in."—London Opinion.

PRECEDING EVENTS

Joe Barry, country youth in New York, ekes out a living as caretaker in a poor rooming house and accordion player in Louie Bertolini's restaurant. Lured by the open country, he spends a night in the fields, near Newburgh. Bertolini discharges him. Friendless and "broke," he is offered $10,000 by a man he knows only as "Martin" to impersonate a liquor runner facing arrest. It means the penitentiary, but Joe is desperate. He defers decision until the next night, and is given $1,000 "on account." Next day Joe deposits $800 in country banks, giving his name as Joseph Bradley. Outside a circus tent he sees an accordion and is tempted to play it. A girl, Sue Dayton, niece of the owner, who admires the music, urges him to join the circus, but Joe says he must first return to New York "on business." He has decided to refuse "Martin's" offer. In his room four men accost him. Bewildered, Joe sees the men, who are detectives, find large amounts of money, a machine gun, and two revolvers. Next day, under arrest, Joe is identified by men who had seen him the night before near Newburgh, when two prohibition agents were killed and robbed. Joe is charged with their murder and robbery. He realizes "Martin's" object—to have him found guilty of the murders, executed, and the case closed. A man known as "Fullhouse," waiter at Bertolini's, hurts Joe's case by his evidence. Joe keeps silent as to his previous day's doings, fearing to embarrass Sue Dayton. Pete Maxwell, a detective, appears friendly, but Joe fears everybody.

Joe Barry raised his arms, piteously.

"Leave me alone, won't you?" he begged. "I don't know what you're talking about. I don't know who you are. I don't care who you are. Leave me alone!"

It struck the other man's sense of pride.

"Yeah?" he asked. "You're up for that chopper job on the Newburgh road and you don't know Hymie Fradke?"

Joe strove to leave him. Hymie Fradke, a little puzzled, followed.

"How'd they fasten that rap on you, Wetears?" he asked.

Soon they were talking upon a different basis. It was surcease, a feeling of sympathy which urged Joe forward; Hymie's manner had changed greatly. Now he was settled beside Joe Barry, his thin, carefully manicured fingers tapping on his knees, or jerking his cigarette in a quick swing from his lips, returning it as swiftly. It was not long before he interrupted.

"Talk lower. Whisper—that's better. We didn't just happen to be put in here together. Ten to one, there's a stool in the next cell with an ear as big as a washtub."

The clatter of slum time came, Hymie sneering at the bars. The night count was made and the lights dimmed. Then Hymie took his dulled companion back to the cot and pressed him down there.

"Yeah?" he asked in a whisper. "This guy Martin, describe him again. Never heard him called Big Friday? No, it couldn't be him; he wouldn't do a thing like that in the open. Must've worked through a fall guy." He shook his head. "I never heard of no Louie Bertolini, but that guy don't sound right either." The thing seemed to fret him. He paced awhile and came back. "'S d—n funny to me," he said to Joe. "That's Big Friday's run up there from Oswego through Schenectady, across to Albany and then down through Newburgh to the Bronx. Ain't I made it for him a dozen times? Yeah, and what do I get out of it? Double-crossed."

An hour went by. The sounds of the street became fainter, giving greater volume to the night noises of the cell block, the creaking of bunks as men tossed in their search of sleep, the snoring of the more hardened ones, the maddening sound of some one pacing, three steps and turn, three steps and turn.

"They gave you a break!" he said grudgingly to Joe. "All you get is the chair; pull the switch and you're out. They ain't so good to me; afraid I'd squawk if I drew the Hot Mama. But I got friends. I ain't in Dannemora yet. That's something more Big Friday don't know; I got more friends in a day'n he ever knew. Wanted it all, didn't he? He'll get it, in a bronze box. Ain't he got it coming to him? Ain't he worth shoving across if you can get at him? How about that baby that crucified you? I suppose you'll rush up and kiss him, if you ever beat this rap? Yeah! You'll do what I'll do to Big Friday. You'll set him over, that's what you'll do!"

His voice faded in a confusion from beyond. The shadows of twisting forms were on the walls; guards seemed to spring from nowhere and everywhere. Wild, racking, the screams of a crazed man rose higher, higher, and then were muffled. There was the scuffling of forms, moving toward the door. Then came the clang of steel, some one screaming at a distance, then farther away, still farther. In the cell with Hymie Fradke, a man walked up and down, his lips bloodless, his eyes burning in fixation.

"Yes, that's right!" he agreed. "He's got it coming to him. He's made me a murderer; well, I'll be one, if I get a chance!"

The cell block stilled. Slowly Joe walked to his bunk, and sat there, a hand pounding against the steel. After a while, Hymie walked across and caught his shoulders with thin, strong fingers.

"Wearing yourself out ain't no way to beat a rap," he commanded. After awhile a dazed man slept.

* * * * * * *

They came for Hymie Fradke the next morning and led him away, Joe did not know where. At noon, they brought him back again. When Joe asked him concerning the trial, he only rolled his eyes and spread a hand.

"I ain't saying nothing!" he answered noncommittally. He was silent until they came to return him through the Bridge of Sighs to the Criminal Courts building for the afternoon session. The long hours passed for Joe, in sodden staring about his cell, in mingling with the other prisoners during exercise hours in the corridors. At last Hymie came back again. He was more nervous now, like a sleek animal eyeing its every surrounding in the hope of an opening. At last he broke forth:

"Keep a guy sitting in that cage all day long. They didn't even begin my trial! Fine on a guy's friends," he growled softly. "Keeping a guy caged up all day and then doing nothing!"

As night came, he seemed more stealthy, more excited. He walked up and down, his lips moving. Suddenly, however, he halted, and looking at Joe as if just realizing he was there, he asked:

"Got any jack, Wetears?"

"Money, you mean? No, they took it all away from me when I was arrested."

"Jeze! You are a Wetears, ain't you?" He explained nothing more until made ready for his bunk. Then,

"How About That Baby That Crucified You? I Suppose You'll Rush Up and Kiss Him."

reaching into his shoe, he removed the insole and brought forth a tightly folded bill from beneath it. "Here, Wetears," he said, It was a twenty-dollar certificate.

Joe took the currency with some surprise.

"They told me I could get money from my envelope whenever I needed any," he said.

"Suppose you get hold of a right screw that'll sell you a paper of snow? They won't give you money downstairs for that. I got mine!" he whispered after a time. "I know when I'll use it, too."

Nor was there an explanation of that remark. He only paced for awhile, sat on his bunk, eyed Joe eagerly, like a man obsessed with inner thoughts, then turned away, silent. The night passed, with its myriad noises. Hymie made ready for another day in the cage, awaiting his turn in the courtroom. Suddenly he turned to Joe, whispering.

"Tell you what I'll do!" he exclaimed. "I'll bet you twenty I beat Dannemora!"

Joe reached for the money.

"It's your twenty," he said.

"Yeah?" Hymie blinked with memory. "That's right," he said. "No fun betting against my own money."

A few minutes later he was taken away to wait anew in the detention room. Joe went back to his bunk; almost immediately he was on his feet again. The guard had returned, and was unlocking the door, this time for him.

Pete Maxwell was waiting to check him out over the Bridge of Sighs. Then down the long, broad staircase they traveled and once more into the magistrate's court on the first floor, where the cage held some twenty men of which group Joe became a silent member.

One by one, guards came to the door, opened it and beckoned men out, pulling the light door, with its ordinary reversed spring lock, swiftly shut behind them as the prisoner passed forth.

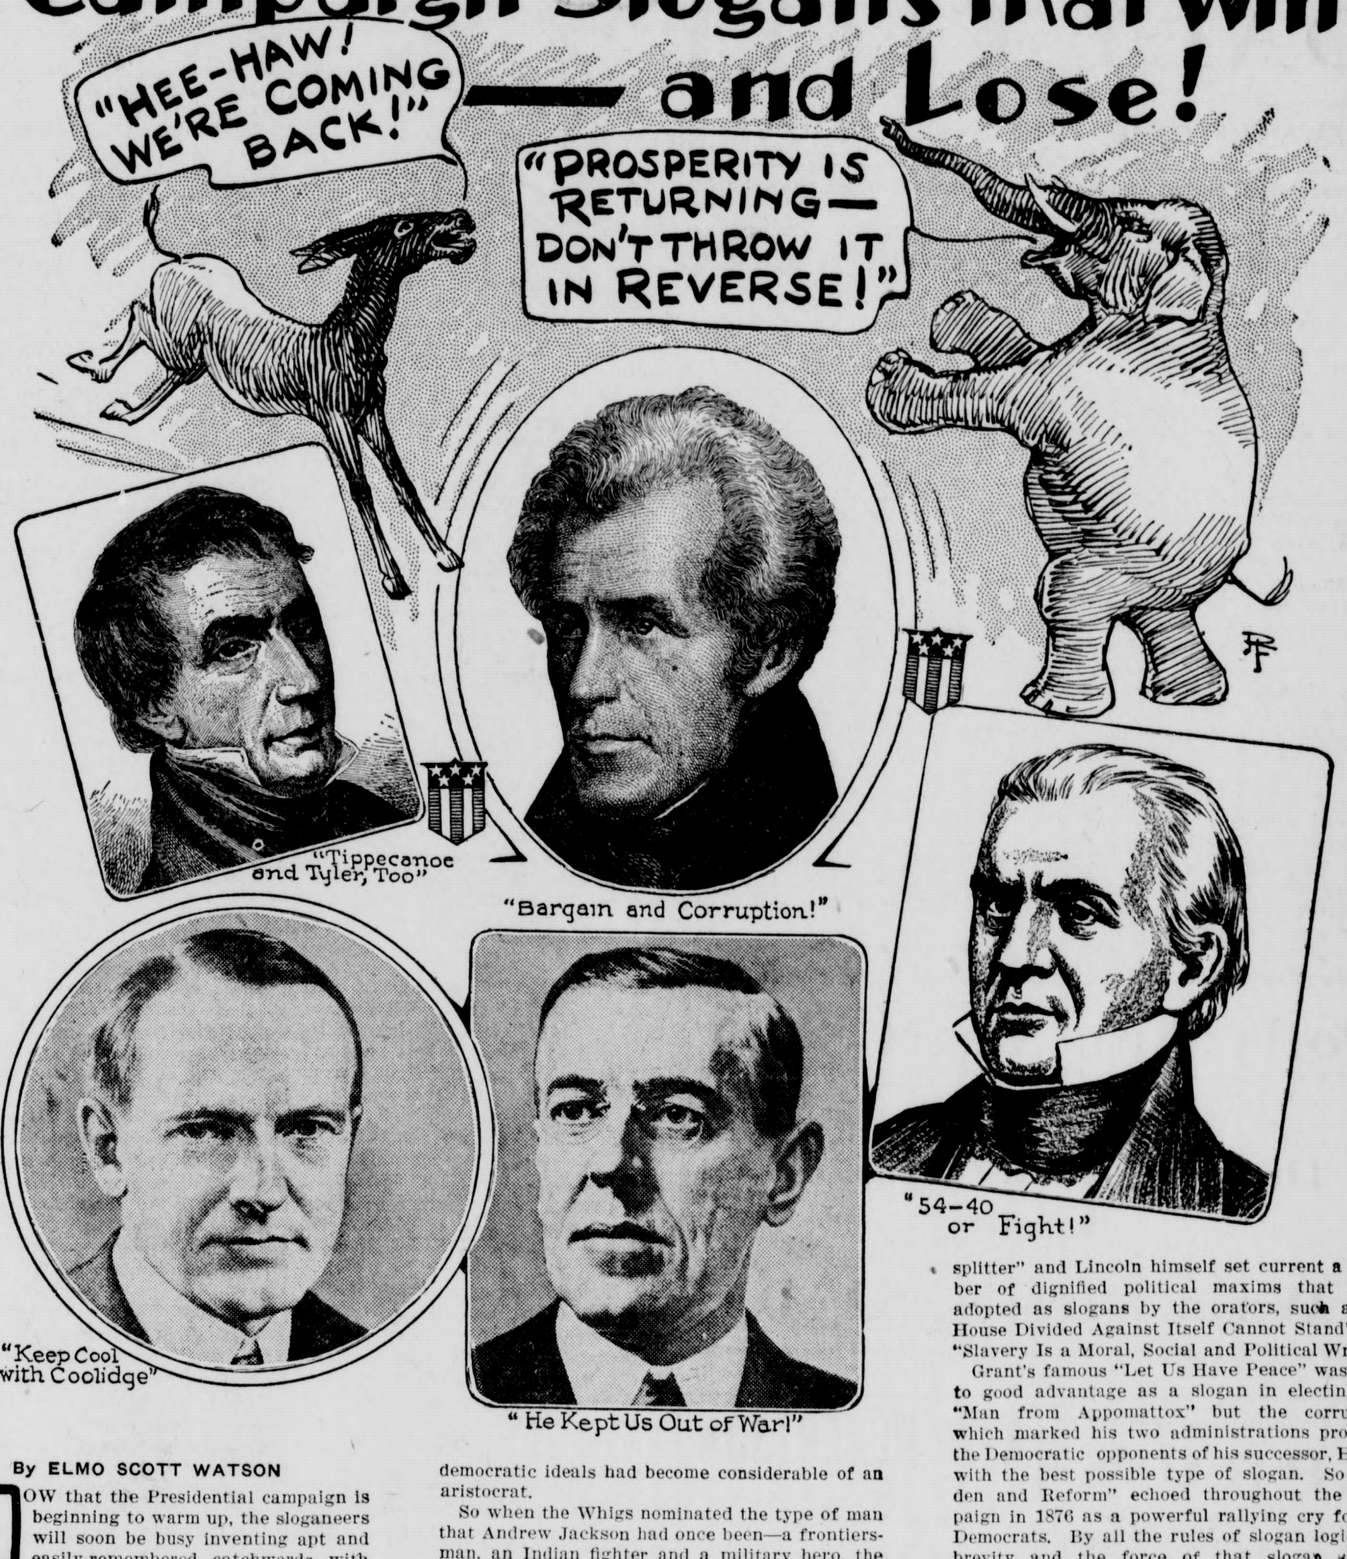
Campaign Slogans that Win —and Lose!



By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

NOW that the Presidential campaign is beginning to warm up, the sloganeers will soon be busy inventing apt and easily-remembered catchwords with which to charm the ear of the voter. Already senatorial groups in both parties have chosen from those submitted in a recent contest mottoes which they hope will advance the cause of their standard-bearers—the Democrats with their "Hee-haw! We're coming back!" and the Republicans with their "Prosperity Is Returning—Don't Throw It in Reverse!" And already there are dissenting opinions to the value of both slogans, both of which have been characterized as "unimpassioned, uninspired and uninspiring." So it would seem that there's still a chance to coin a phrase which will play its part in electing our next President and, if we may judge by past history, that slogan may be brought into being at the most unexpected time and under the most unexpected circumstances any time between now and November 8.

How potent a slogan may be in winning for a Presidential candidate (and also for losing one!) is easily seen by an examination of American political history. The first effective use of the campaign slogan was away back in 1800 when the Republican party (which later became the Democratic) raised the cry of "Equal rights for all; special privileges for none!" in protest against the aristocratic tendencies of the Federalist party and swept Thomas Jefferson into office over John Adams, who was a candidate for re-election.

Then followed 24 years of rule by the "Virginia dynasty"—Jefferson, Madison and Monroe—and the Federalist party disappeared from the scene, leaving only the Republicans, who now called themselves Democrats, with various factions within the party. In 1824 there were four outstanding candidates—John Quincy Adams, Monroe's secretary of state; William Crawford, his secretary of the treasury; Henry Clay, a member of the house of representatives, and Andrew Jackson, a member of the senate.

In the election Jackson led in both the popular and the electoral vote but did not have a majority. So the election was thrown into the house of representatives and there Clay threw his support to Adams, resulting in his election. When the new President Adams offered Clay the post of secretary of state, Jackson adherents raised the cry of "Bargain and Corruption!" They kept that slogan warm for four years and in the election of 1828 it helped Jackson defeat Adams and sent him to the White House, there to stay for eight years. In the meantime the Whig party had been formed but its strength in the 1832 campaign was divided and Jackson again was an easy winner.

When "Old Hickory" was through with being President he passed his mantle along to his secretary of state, Martin Van Buren, who was elected in 1836 over four Whig candidates, one of them, William Henry Harrison. Then came the famous campaign of 1840 when a slogan very definitely won an election. This time one of the defeated Whig candidates of the previous election was swept into office on a platform of slogans and songs.

Affairs had gone badly for Van Buren during his four years. They had been four years of "continued executive autocracy, of undiminished official partisanship, of increasingly violent interference with the fiscal system of the nation, of unrelenting administrative abuse of power." There had been a panic and Van Buren was proposing measures which might upset the financial stability of the nation. Then, too, this President who was supposed to be an upholder of democratic ideals had become considerable of an aristocrat.

So when the Whigs nominated the type of man that Andrew Jackson had once been—a frontiersman, an Indian fighter and a military hero, the nation was ready to turn (to state it paradoxically) from a Democrat who was an aristocrat to a Whig who was a democrat. Unwittingly a Democratic newspaper gave the Whig candidate the greatest boost it could possibly have given him. Sneering at his intellectual caliber (which admittedly was small) it said, "Give him a barrel of cider in a log cabin the remainder of his life."

And what a godsend that was to the Whigs! Immediately the log cabin and the hard cider barrel became their symbols and Harrison's Indian-fighting record furnished them the ringing war cry of "Tippecanoe and Tyler, Too!" Just for good measure they threw in a few pointed remarks at Van Buren, such as "Van, Van is a Used-Up Man" and "With Tip and Tyler We'll Bust Van's Biler." They also anticipated the "full dinner pail" appeal to the voter with "Van's Policy: Fifty Cents a Day and French Soup; Our Policy: Two Dollars a Day and Roast Beef."

Four years later the campaign witnessed not only the appearance of the first "dark horse" in a Presidential campaign but also another telling slogan. The "dark horse" was James K. Polk of Tennessee and the slogan was "Fifty-Four Forty or Fight!" At that time the United States was involved in two disputes, one with Mexico over Texas and the other with Great Britain over the Oregon country. The Democrats stood for "reoccupation of the Oregon country and re-annexation of Texas." The Fifty-Four Forty or Fight" represented the northern boundary line which the United States demanded—54 degrees, 40 minutes, north, latitude. What we actually got (and not by fighting either, but by arbitration) was 49 degrees. So the slogan didn't mean so much after the election, but it did play a vital part in deciding the election in Polk's favor, as did the slogan "Polk and Texas; Clay and No Texas" in regard to the Texas question.

In the war with Mexico which followed so soon after Polk's election one of our victorious generals was Zachary Taylor and from an incident in the battle of Buena Vista came a slogan which helped elect Taylor President in 1848. It was the famous "A little more grape, Captain Bragg" which struck the popular fancy as being just what a great military commander would say under the circumstances. What he actually did say on that occasion was the laconic "Give 'em hell!" But that didn't matter so much as the fact that the combination of the "grape" slogan and his popular nickname of "Old Rough and Ready" (so reminiscent of "Old Hickory" and "Old Tippecanoe") had much the same appeal as the Jackson combination and the Harrison combination of slogan and nickname.

In the same year was born a slogan that crystallized in popular phraseology the most fateful movement in American history. It was "Free Soil, Free Speech, Free Labor and Free Men," taken from a plank in the platform of the Free Soil party of 1848, the forerunner of the Republican party that nominated and elected Abraham Lincoln in 1860. The stirring campaign of 1860 was fruitful in slogans, as it was one of the bitterest in our history. Among them were, "Millions for Freedom, Not One Cent for Slavery," "Intervention Is Disunion," "Popular Sovereignty and National Union," "Free Homes for Free Men," "The Constitution and the Union, Now and Forever," "Let Liberty Be National and Slavery Sectional," and scores of others, on both sides of the slavery controversy, in similar appealing strains. Numerous catch phrases were woven about the title "Old Abe" and "The Rail-splitter" and Lincoln himself set current a number of dignified political maxims that were adopted as slogans by the orators, such as "A House Divided Against Itself Cannot Stand" and "Slavery Is a Moral, Social and Political Wrong."

Grant's famous "Let Us Have Peace" was used to good advantage as a slogan in electing the "Man from Appomattox" but the corruption which marked his two administrations provided the Democratic opponents of his successor, Hayes, with the best possible type of slogan. So "Tilden and Reform" echoed throughout the campaign in 1876 as a powerful rallying cry for the Democrats. By all the rules of slogan logic, the brevity and the force of that slogan should have won for Tilden but election boards and an electoral commission decided otherwise.

In the campaign of 1884 there was a case of history repeating itself in that, just as in the case of Harrison and the Whigs in 1840, Cleveland and the Democrats profited by a blunder made by the opposition. In that year Blaine was the Republican candidate and his Presidential aspirations were favored by his nicknames of the "Plumed Knight" and the "Rupert of Debate" as well as by the tuneful quality of the rallying cry of "Blaine, Blaine, Blaine of Maine." These were offset, however, somewhat by "Nosey Blaine," "The Tattooed Man" and "Jim, the Penman," the latter referring to the famous Mulligan Letters.

But the fatal blow to his chances was struck when an enthusiastic Blaine supporter, Rev. R. B. Burchard declared in a speech that all conscientious Americans should vote the Republican ticket because the Democrats stood for "Rum, Romanism and Rebellion." Blaine was present at the time but did not hear him distinctly enough to realize the gross error and to repudiate this slur upon the religious belief of millions of Americans. So the slogan which the Republicans had attempted to tack on the Democrats proved to be a boomerang and aided in defeating their candidate.

Cleveland's first campaign contributed "The Man of Destiny" and "Tell the Truth" to the slogan stock, both of which had a strong appeal to the voters.

The tariff campaigns were prolific with slogans—among the most telling ones were "Protection and Prosperity," "Free Trade and Pauperized Labor" and "Free Trade and the Destruction of American Industries," which the practical Mark Hanna boiled down into the vote-getting slogan of "The Full Dinner Pail."

William Jennings Bryan, who is associated in most Americans' memory with Clay, Tilden and Blaine as men "who just missed the Presidency," had a strong slogan—strong in its brevity and its capability of being easily remembered—in his "Sixteen to One." But it wasn't strong enough to win the election for him the first time he tried and he never was able to get another which brought him any nearer to the White House.

Sometimes a slogan will have a "kick-back" after it has accomplished its purpose. There is no doubt but that "He Kept Us Out of War" helped re-elect Woodrow Wilson in 1916. And then fate decreed that with six months after his election we should be "in" and not "out" of war. "Too Proud to Fight" was another phrase that haunted him.

As for the slogans of recent years, they are too familiar to most of us to need much comment. War-weary America turned "Back to Normalcy" with Warren G. Harding in 1920. In 1924 when the Democrats hoped that it was restless under Republican misrule and hot for a change, they learned that it had decided to "Keep Cool With Coolidge" instead of vote for "Better Days With Davis." In 1928 the Democrats, wearing a brown derby and singing "The Sidewalks of New York" asked America to remember its "Eight Years of Wall Street" and to "Give Main Street a Chance." But instead of heeding this advice America voted for "Hoover and Prosperity." What slogans America will be repeating this year will depend upon who is nominated at the two conventions in Chicago next June and which will be the better of the two slogans will be decided at the polls in November.

tree for the Cubs, and Councilman Henry Sundermann officiated at the planting of the tree for the Scouts. At each ceremony, the boys formed a circle, the Scouts around one tree and the Cubs about the other. Each boy, in turn, stepped forward and placed a handful of earth at the base of the tree. Councilman Julius Twesten assisted in the conduction of these ceremonies.

Mr. John McLaren, Superintendent of Golden Gate Park in San Francisco, donated the two beautiful acacia trees that were used for this occasion.

The boys were again lined up on each side of the walk and then the Cubs repeated their oath.

Councilman Arthur J. Bodien introduced the speaker of the day, Mayor H. H. Smith, who in the high-lights of his very interesting talk, explained that he felt it was most fitting to plant a living monument to the memory of the first President of our great country. He further stated that these trees would greatly help to beautify our park, in addition to being a marker to the memory of a true American. His address was well received and he was warmly applauded for his well phrased remarks.

The American Legion and Auxiliary, who were returning from a similar ceremony at Burlingame that morning, requested permission to participate in this dedication, which was granted, and their colors gave a colorful background to the event.

Through the courtesy of Mr. Jerry Covell, manager of the Daly City Theatre, motion pictures were taken of the dedication and will be shown at the Daly City Theatre in the near future. Watch for the announcement.

The committee did not decide to hold this dedication until the previous Wednesday evening, when the matter was brought up at their meeting. However, we believe that they should be complimented for the efficient manner in which the ceremonies were conducted, considering the short time allotted to the preparations for this affair.

City Councilman Arthur J. Bodien, chairman of the district committee, Boy Scouts of America, District No. 11, wishes to express the thanks of the committee to all who helped to make this tree dedication a huge success.

SPLINTERS

From the H. H. Smith Lumber Yard

VOLUME 4 FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 26, 1932 NUMBER 31

Published in the interests of the People of Daly City and vicinity by H. H. Smith and Employees.

"The fellow who killed the policeman died last night."

"Yes?"

"Yes, he sat on the electric chair and the shock was too great for him."

Neighbor: "What's all the loud talk in your house?"

Child: "Oh, father and mother are swapping animals."

Neighbor: "Swapping animals?"

Child: "Yes, mother passed the buck to him and got his goat."

Let us figure with you on the new house you are going to build.

Ideas are funny little things. They won't work unless you do.

"Just paid another $25 off the doctor's bill, darling."

"Splendid, Jack; one more payment and the baby's ours."

"How come you in jail, Rastus?"

"Sho' jes a case of mistaken identity."

"Who all did dey mistake yo' fo'?"

"I mistook a pro'-bition officer for a good customer."
